Disease As Result Of Prolonged Drought In Eye Of Health Heads

Typhoid Fever Shows Increase In Many States Throughout Nation.

OHIO FROM 27 TO 46

With No Vegetable or Fruits Increase In Pellegra Is Forecasted.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—With hundreds already reported dead as a result of a succession of terrific heat waves throught the nation this summer, public health officers today are redoubling precautions to prevent a possible spread of disease as a result of the prolonged drought.

Direct danger lurks in the continuation of the drought, officials of the U. S. Public Health Service declared. Not only may disease result directly from the conditions brought about by the drought but it also may exert an indirect influence upon health of millions, officials said.

Thus far, the records disclose, there has been an increase in typhoid fever in several states most seriously affected by the dought. The increase is not sufficient to arouse alarm.

Disease and death may spring from four different sources, as a result of the drought it was pointed out by officials of the Public Health Service. They are:

Death and illness directly attributed to extreme heat.

Drying up of wells in rural areas, subjecting waters to impurities which produce typhoid germs or turning people to streams for water.

INCREASE PELLAGRA

Lack of production of vegetables and fruits, particularly in some of the southern states, with a consequent increase in pellagra.

Reduction of the milk supply in some areas, with danger of insufficient supply for babies.

The Public Health Services reports disclose 930 cases of typhoid fever in the country in the week ending August 2, as compared to 870 cases during the same period a year ago. There also was an increase the previous week, the total being 826 as compared to 777 the same week last year.

Increase in typhoid fever cases from the week ending July 27 to the week ending August 2, include Pennsylvania, 25 to 40; Ohio, 27 to 46; Indiana, 6 to 15; Illinoise, 32 to 46; Missouri, 13 to 25; Maryland 25 to 34; West Virginia, 28 to 35; North Carolina, 56 to 70; South Carolina, 70 to 83.

Many sections of the south, which have suffered frequently in the last three years from floods, are facing a fight to prevent an increase in pellagra. Recently the Public Health Service obtained funds from the Rockefeller foundation, after failure to renew a federal appropriation to continue rural sanitation work. The action was taken after some southern health officers said there was an increase in pellagra, caused chiefly by improper nutrition.

State health officers, reports showed, are taking unusual precautions to guard the public health

"We have had but one outbreak of typhoid in Maryland," said Dr. John Collingson, acting state health director. "This was traced directly to the milk supply in one town; and was not connected with the drought.

"Because of the drought our engineers are watching the water supply in all sections of the state. At the first evidence of impurities, we are prepared to order an increase in chlorination."

Thus far, Dr. Collingson said, there have been no outbreaks in rural communities due to polluted wells.

One section of the Potomac river above Washington has been quarantined by health officers, with a $25 fine for bathing in it.

THREE NATIONS MOVE TO SAVE THEIR CITIZENS

U. S. Government Landing Marines and Bluejackets In Chinese Cities.

SHANGHI, Aug., 7.—Armed forces of at least three foreign governments were ready to take active part in the protection of the life and property of their nationals as the Communist menace continued to threaten the entire Yangtse valley.

British rifle and machine gun units comprising of 110 men were ordered to sail for Hankow from here to strengthen British naval forces already hovering off the endangered city. They will arrive Sunday and be quartered aboard the cruiser Cumberland.

Three hundred Japanese soldiers aboard four destroyers were enroute to Kiukiang, Kiongsi province, to afford protection to nationals in case the Communist hordes launch their expected drive against the summer resorts there.

The United States government, it was learned, is planning to land marines and bluejackets from its gunboats for the protection of its nationals in the event Communists capture Hankow.

Local Chinese authorities meanwhile attempted to utilize all means at their disposal to curb the Red menace, which has suddenly developed from scattered raids by large bands of brigands into formidable attacks on prosperous cities by closely knit and well equipped Red armies. The object of the Red commanders, to all appearances, is to capture all leading and stragetic cities in the Yangtse valley, thereby shaping together a strong Communist government dominating the entire wealthy area.

BOYS SHARE REWARD NOT BOLTENHOUSE

Youths Discover Body Then Tell Older Man, Is Story Told Police.

Three boys, between the ages of 14 and 16, will share and share alike the reward of $100 offered for the recovery of the body of Miss Carrie Benford, 5[illegible] which was found three miles so[illegible] of the Scioto River Bridge Tuesday morning, and not Alonzo Boltenhouse who claimed the reward Tuesday, according to J. Wallace Crist, who had charge of an investigation conducted Thursday.

The three lads, James Bowsher, aged 14, Emmett Cook, aged 14 and Finton Boltenhouse, aged 16, brother of Alonzo Boltenhouse, told Safety Director Crist Thursday morning that they found the body in the brush in the Scioto River Monday morning but did not report it.

The three young boys had been out on the river in a boat and saw the body in the same spot in which it was found Tuesday. They went home and Finton Boltenhouse told his brother, Alonzo, about the discovery, and the latter upon going to the spot Tuesday morning at once saw the body and reported his discovery at police headquarters.

The two younger lads, Bowsher and Cook, had been told to be quiet about the discovery and did not know that the body had been taken from the river until they had read an account of the discovery in the Tuesday issue of the Herald. They then went to police Officer McCrady and told him about their discovery and he then ordered an investigation.

Alonzo Boltenhouse will not receive any of the reward, and the three younger lads will each receive one third of the amount.

LOS ANGELES, Aug 7-Captain Frank Hawks was preparing to play golf with his father here today after resting from the strain of flying from New York in 14 hour and 50 minutes, completing the first crossing of the continent in full daylight and establishing a new east-west transcontinental record.

Hawks, making six stops, clipped 3 hours, 5 minutes and 11 seconds from the east-west record of 18:42.54 made by Col. Roscoe Turner last May. Turner made one stop. Hawks' actual flying time, deducting the stops, was 13 hours and 31 minutes.

The golf match was arranged by the flyer's father. Charles M. Hawks, by telephone just before his noted son took off at dawn yesterday from Curtiss Field, N Y. They planned to play yesterday, and when the son arrived, three hours of perfect golfing time remained, but the flyer's mother ruled that food and rest were more important.

Hawks plans to take off Sunday in quest of another speed record on the return trip to New York, on which stops will also be made He has set ten hours as his goal, and expects to have the aid of tail winds over most of the journey Head winds and thunderstorms delayed his westward flight

On the eastward journey Hawks hopes to better the record of 11 hours and 45 minutes by Col and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh last Easter Sunday Hawks will make the same stops he did on the westward journey Columbus O., St Louis, Wichita, Kans., Albuquerque, N. M., and Kingham, Ariz

No Americans Reported Lost As River Sweeps Hotel Off Foundation.

FIND BODIES FLOATING

Wall of Water Five Feet High Strikes Nogales, Mex., Shortly After 12 M.

NOGALES, Ariz., Aug. 7—Forty persons, many of them children, were reported missing on the Mexican side of the International border in the flood which swept the twin cities of Nogales during the night.

No Americans were reported missing on this side of the line.

Two bodies, believed to have been swept across the line were found floating in a street on the American side.

At the height of the flood, the Velasco Hotel, on the Mexican side of the border, collapsed. The number of guests was unknown and the guest register was swept away in the flood.

The twin cities of Nogales, Ariz., and Nogales, Sonora, Mexico, on each side of the International border today were digging out from under the debris of the worst flood in the history, following a night of terror.

The bodies of an unidentified man and woman were found floating in the main street of Nogales Arizona, at daybreak when the work of rescue was started. Many other drownings were reported.

Lights went out early in the storm.

The screams of terrified women and children were interminglec with the roar of rushing water and the crash of crumbling homes.

CLOUDBURST STRIKES

Night life in the gay cities of Nogales, Mexico, was in full swing when a downpour resembling a cloudburst swept down upon the towns that turned the dry caked beds of the Santa Rita mountains Mexico, into [illegible] rivers [illegible] of the border.

Railroad tracks, telegraph and telephone lines were swept away in the rush of waters.

At 6 A. M., an organized effort was being made to reach the Mexican side of the border where the greatest damage was suffered and the death toll, it is believed will be heavy.

Starting at midnight, the rain reached the intensity of a cloudburst at 3 a. m. with lights out trees falling and buildings crumbling under the rush of waters from the mountains, rescue work was impossible.

Three feet of water swept through the police station on the Mexican side of the border. In an effort to prevent drownings when it was believed the building would crumble many prisoners were released.

Five feet of water swirled through the city hall on the American side of the border at 6 a. m.

No estimate could be placed on the property loss but all business houses on both sides of the border were flooded.

The flood waters receded as rapidly as they came.

Streets and highways were blocked with fallen telephone and electric light poles, overturned and wrecked automobiles and furniture which gave mute testimony to the home-wrecking toll taken during the night.

While water still swept through the first floor of the Chamber of Commerce building, under the light of torches and lanterns, relief work was organized on the second floor and efforts were made to reach the Mexican side of the border.

BULKLEY TALKS

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 7—"The Eighteenth amendment provides no market for the farmer's grain, nor does it provide any honest work for business or wage earners," declared a statement which was issued here today by Robert J. Bulkley, Cleveland, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator.

"If the Democrats of Ohio think better of a candidate for United States Senator who straddles or who conceals his opinion with respect to an issue of general interest and of such pressing importance that it is sure to be voted upon in the near future, then I don't want the nomination and I won't want it until such time as the Democratic voters insist upon knowing what their candidate stand for," said Bulkley

Good Luck!

Some folks may call it good luck to always get results from Herald classified ads—but an advertisement properly written will always get you plenty of prospects who are interested in your proposition.

Recently an ad "refrigerator for sale" was inserted in the classified section, and the very night the ad appeared in the paper the ice box was sold.

Then too, the advertiser remarked he could have sold ten or twleve more if he had them, for that many folks had answered the ad.

Now if you have a refrigerator that you no-longer-use, or anything else for that matter, call 782, ask for an adtaker, tell her what you have to sell.

Forty Are Lost When Cloudburst Descends Razing Border Village

No Americans Reported Lost As River Sweeps Hotel Off Foundation.

FIND BODIES FLOATING

Wall of Water Five Feet High Strikes Nogales, Mex., Shortly After 12 M.

NOGALES, Ariz., Aug. 7—Forty persons, many of them children, were reported missing on the Mexican side of the International border in the flood which swept the twin cities of Nogales during the night.

No Americans were reported missing on this side of the line.

Two bodies, believed to have been swept across the line were found floating in a street on the American side.

At the height of the flood, the Velasco Hotel, on the Mexican side of the border, collapsed. The number of guests was unknown and the guest register was swept away in the flood.

The twin cities of Nogales, Ariz., and Nogales, Sonora, Mexico, on each side of the International border today were digging out from under the debris of the worst flood in the history, following a night of terror.

The bodies of an unidentified man and woman were found floating in the main street of Nogales, Arizona, at daybreak when the work of rescue was started. Many other drownings were reported.

Lights went out early in the storm.

The screams of terrified women and children were intermingled with the roar of rushing waters and the crash of crumbling homes.

CLOUDBURST STRIKES

Night life in the gay clubs of Nogales, Mexico, was in full swing when a downpour resembling a cloudburst swept down upon the towns that turned the dry creek beds of the Santa Rita mountains, Mexico, into roaring rivers which [illegible] of the border.

Railroad tracks, telegraph and telephone lines were swept away in the rush of waters.

At 6 A. M., an organized effort was being made to reach the Mexican side of the border where the greatest damage was suffered and the death toll, it is believed will be heavy.

Starting at midnight, the rain reached the intensity of a cloudburst at 3 a. m. with lights out, trees falling and buildings crumbling under the rush of waters from the mountains, rescue work was impossible.

Three feet of water swept through the police station on the Mexican side of the border. In an effort to prevent drownings when it was believed the building would crumble many prisoners were released.

Five feet of water swirled through the city hall on the American side of the border at 6 a. m.

No estimate could be placed on the property loss but all business houses on both sides of the border were flooded.

The flood waters receded as rapidly as they came.

Streets and highways were blocked with fallen telephone and electric light poles, overturned and wrecked automobiles and furniture which gave mute testimony to the home-wrecking toll taken during the night.

While water still swept through the first floor of the Chamber of Commerce building, under the light of torches and lanterns, relief work was organized on the second floor and efforts were made to reach the Mexican side of the border.

BULKLEY TALKS

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 7.—"The Eighteenth amendment provides no market for the farmer's grain, nor does it provide any honest work for business or wage earners," declared a statement which was issued here today by Robert J. Bulkley, Cleveland, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator.

"If the Democrats of Ohio think better of a candidate for United States Senator who straddles, or who conceals his opinion with respect to an issue of general interest and of such pressing importance that it is sure to be voted upon in the near future, then I don't want the nomination, and I won't want it until such time as the Democratic voters insist upon knowing what their candidates stand for," said Bulkley.

BOYS SHARE REWARD NOT BOLTENHOUSE

Youths Discover Body Then Tell Older Man, Is Story Told Police.

Three boys, between the ages of 14 and 16, will share and share alike the reward of $100 offered for the recovery of the body of Miss Carrie Benford, 5[illegible] which was found three miles s[illegible] of the Scioto River Bridge Tuesday morning, and not Alonzo Boltenhouse who claimed the reward Tuesday, according to J. Wallace Crist, who had charge of an investigation conducted Thursday.

The three lads, James Bowsher, aged 14, Emmett Cook, aged 14 and Finton Boltenhouse, aged 16, brother of Alonzo Boltenhouse, told Safety Director Crist Thursday morning that they found the body in the brush in the Scioto River Monday morning but did not report it.

The three young boys had been out on the river in a boat and saw the body in the same spot in which it was found Tuesday. They went home and Finton Boltenhouse told his brother, Alonzo, about the discovery, and the latter upon going to the spot Tuesday morning at once saw the body and reported his discovery at police headquarters.

The two younger lads, Bowsher and Cook, had been told to be quiet about the discovery and did not know that the body had been taken from the river until they had read an account of the discovery in the Tuesday issue of the Herald. They then went to police Officer McGrady and told him about their discovery and he then ordered an investigation.

Alonzo Boltenhouse will not receive any of the reward, and the three younger lads will each receive one third of the amount.

HAWKS SETS NEW RECORD

Prepares To Leave For Try At Lindbergh's West To East Speed Mark.

LOS ANGELES, Aug 7-Captain Frank Hawks was preparing to play golf with his father here today after resting from the strain of flying from New York in 14 hour and 50 minutes, completing the first crossing of the continent in full daylight and establishing a new east-west transcontinental record.

Hawks, making six stops, clipped 3 hours, 5 minutes and 11 seconds from the east-west record of 18:42.54 made by Col. Roscoe Turner last May. Turner made one stop. Hawks' actual flying time, deducting the stops, was 13 hours and 31 minutes.

The golf match was arranged by the flyer's father, Charles M. Hawks, by telephone just before his noted son took off at dawn yesterday from Curtiss Field, N. Y. They planned to play yesterday, and when the son arrived, three hours of perfect golfing time remained, but the flyer's mother ruled that food and rest were more important.

Hawks plans to take off Sunday in quest of another speed record on the return trip to New York, on which stops will also be made. He has set ten hours as his goal, and expects to have the aid of tail winds over most of the journey. Head winds and thunderstorms delayed his westward flight.

On the eastward journey, Hawks hopes to better the record of 14 hours and 45 minutes by Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh last Easter Sunday. Hawks will make the same stops he did on the westward journey—Columbus, O., St. Louis, Wichita, Kans; Albuquerque, N. M., and Kingham, Ariz.

Mrs. Charles Pavey has returned to her home in Columbus, after a short visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Rector of S. Scioto-st.

Virginia Senator Calls Tariff Act Vicious

One of the most effective ways of relieving the depressed condition of business and agriculture would be to revise the "vicious" rates of the Grundy tariff act, according to Senator Swanson (above), Democrat, from Virginia. The Senator declared that world markets are being steadily closed to American trade.

ACTIVITIES OF CITY COUNCIL

Request To Abandon Alley, Order To Sign Lease, Water Report, Are Read.

A petition, signed by Alfred Lee and others, asking for the abandonment of Nicoll's alley was presented to city council Wednesday with final action to be taken at the next meeting.

Council instructed Mayor B. T. Hedges to sign a lease between the city and the Container Corporation of America for the plot of ground now being used for the operation of the sewage disposal plant.

W. A. Dark, a representative of the water company, was present and presented a proposition to council in regard to rates for hydrants and domestic consumers and on motion of W. F. Baker, the matter was referred to a committee consisting of all the members of council.

The proposed rates will not be disclosed until this committee meets.

WHEAT QUOTED AT HIGH MARK

Continued Drought In Midwest Boosts Price To Over $1 Per Bushel.

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug 7—Grains opened at higher prices on the Chicago board of trade today with both wheat and corn quoted above a dollar a bushel.

The continued drough, despite "dry weather" showers in the wheat and corn belt, and high temperatures burning up the crops were responsible for the continued raise in grain prices.

September corn quoted at $1.01½ to $1.02 a bushel was above September wheat at 97½ cents for the first time in many years.

Wheat opened 1-2 to 1 3-4 cents higher, corn 1-8 to 3-4 cents up and oats were 1-4 to 5-8 cents down.

December wheat sold at $1.03 1-3 to $1.04 1-4 at the opening and March was quoted at $1.09 to $1.11. March corn was selling at $1.02 and December at 98 3-4 cents. Oats were selling from 43 to 49 1-4 cents.

Mrs. Wallace Emmons and son, Larry, of Columbus, are guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Sensenbrenner of E. Mound-st.

"Sea Bride," Thrilling Novel, Begins Today

BYRD AND THE POLAR EXPEDITIONS

Chapter XIV

Preparation for a Flight to the North Pole and Another Setback, followed by a Great Achievement

It had finally come, the seemingly sure promise of a fulfillment of the boyish dream; not the precise fulfillment, but one even more splendid though of a different sort. Peary had been there. But he was going to be one of the first to reach it by air. He would not be able to make the record he had vowed to make; but he would make a record on which he need look with nothing short of hearty pride.

He began to study and plan Once more he lived so much with his ship that he seemed almost a part of it. Watchmen making their rounds by day and night were not surprised when they did see Lieutenant Byrd, but when they did not see him.

Once more, for the third time, all his plans were brought to nothing. Like the C-5 and the ZR-2 the Shenandoah also met with disaster. She, also, went up on a test flight. With forty-three persons aboard she left her hanger at Lakewood, N. J., "with everything functioning normally," as the report later put it. The purpose was to make a long trial run into the west. At midnight, after an all-day voyage among the clouds, and after having escaped a severe storm, the craft suddenly, for a reason not aparent at the time, began a swift ascent. A considerable amount of gas was valved out, whereupon she began a descent almost as rapidly. Now ballast was tossed overboard, and she shot up again. More gas was valved away. She dipped, bent, then unexpectedly broke in two. One heavy half of her, emptied of its supply of gas, plunged to the earth. The other, with full, unbroken compartments, came down so slowly as to save the lives of the men in it.

Professor George L. Clark, director of the research laboratory of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, concluded that defects in the metal work were responsible for the disaster.

"The results of our investigation," Byrd read, "do not place the responsibility for the crash upon the manufacturers of the metal. It was merely a case of inadequate research." This, and much more Byrd read, for once again he was gleaning what benefit he could out of the wreck of the ship which, had it remained whole, would have taught him so much more. Once again, he was the recipient of that oddly good-bad luck which left him whole, but brought his high hopes to nothing.

Three times, in something like five years, his plans and hopes had been frustrated. If he had not been driven by the admirable discontent which was so deeply buried in him, he would, probably, have given up. But that was so urgent a force in his life that it enabled him to survive still another disappointment.

In the same year that the Shenandoah fell, Roald Amundsen, the Norse explorer, was planning just such another flight into the North as the Shenandoah was to have taken. He needed experienced aviators to manage three supplementary planes which he proposed should accompany his dirigible, and he invited the United States to supply one of these. The Navy accepted the invitation. Byrd promptly applied for permission to go. He was as promptly rejected. The reason? No! This time it was not the bad foot. It was his marriage. The Navy decided that a married man had too many responsibilities to make the flight.

And then, as if he had not received heavy blows enough, he was retired again. Some one in Washington, doubtless, had recalled that undependable foot. And by this time his services were apparently less valuable. Seven years had passed since he had been back into the service. Many men had learned to fly.

Byrd took his retirement soberly, as he had taken the one back in 1916. But then he did what men who are possessed of the greater discontent are compelled to do. Deprived now of any hope of going on a naval aerial expedition of magnitude, and notwithstanding the setbacks which he had suffered, setbacks which would have made many a man fear his own ability, he promptly set about organizing an Arctic expedition of his own, an aerial Arctic expedition, of course.

Byrd could not know it at the time, but the turning point had come. He had had his lean years. Now the fat was awaiting him. And he was ready. For almost ten years he had been preparing, studying, storing up knowledge. Now, just when he was filled to the bursting point, he found the opportunity to use all he had acquired. It wasn't given him. There was no business of pure and simple luck about it. He made his position by going out and inspiring the material assistance without which he could have done nothing.

In 1926 the old boyish dream, which was to reach the well-nigh incredible climax in 1929 above the South Pole, entered its first stage of reality. In that year Byrd made, successfully, his first Polar flight. Early in April the steamer Chantier, carrying the Commander and forty-seven volunteers, sailed out of New York Harbor with a blue and gold pennant flying from its masthead and farthest north as its goal. The man who was not strong enough to serve in the United States Navy was off on the first of two expeditions which were to equip him with that information which he needed to carry through the crowning achievement of his middle life—the dramatic expedition into the Antarctic, the spectacular flight over the South Pole.

Shortly before he set sail, Byrd gave public thanks to the men who had made his expedition possible. his financial backers—Edsel Ford, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Vincent Astor, A. L. Frothingham of Massachusetts, Dwight W. Morrow, Thomas Fortune Ryan, Porter W. Adams, William Schiff, Godfrey L Cabot, R. F. Hoyt, P. D. Rouse, William A. Read, Captain and Mrs. Gibbons, Lorillard Spencer, the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, Robert W. Russell and William H. Todd.

These were the men who had supplied him with his ship, and had filled her hold with boxes batteries, bags, barrels, crates, skiis, and a wealth of miscellaneous stores. These were the men who, most important of all, had supplied the giant Fokker plane which was to be used in the final dash to the top of the world, and the fleet Curtiss Oriole, the auxiliary ship of the air. The rescue ship, too, in case a rescue ship happened to be needed.

These backers were foremost among the thousands who waved Byrd a hearty farewell as he got his ship hastily underway. His was a hasty departure because inevitable delays had held him a considerable time after his planned day of leaving and it had become necessary to push on with all possible speed in order to get in his exploration expeditions before the advent of the dense fogs which always occur late in the Arctic Spring. Such fogs conceal the earth, making flying useless and well-nigh impossible.

There was another, equally legitimate need for speed. Byrd was only one of three men leading expeditions into the Far North that year. Captain George Wilkins was at Nome, Alaska, with both dogs and planes, preparing to cover virtually the same territory that had been included in Byrd's program. And in Rome, amid the cheers of a huge crowd, Captain Raold Amundsen, commanding the Amundsen-Ellsworth Mobile expedition, was getting away for Oslo, Norway, whence he planned to start on a dirigible flight which would also overlap, in its purpose, the Byrd expedition.

With his crew of forty-six men Byrd sent the unprententious Chantier rapidly down the bay and out into the ocean. Chief among his companions were:

Floyd O. Bennett, aviation pilot, United States Navy, second in command.

Lieut. G. O. Noville, U. S. N., third in command and flight engineer.

Lieut. Alton N. Parker, U. S. M. C. Reserve, pilot.

William C. Haynes, meteorologists, United States Weather Bureau.

Dr. Daniel O'Brien, physician of the expedition.

T. H. Kincaid, engine expert, Wright Aeronautical Corporation.

L. N. Peterson, mechanic.

All stout adventurers, and that they were assumed to be stout eaters, too, was attested by the provisions in the hold—400 pounds of pemmican, 4,500 pounds of whole carcass beef, great stores of corned and dried beef, mutton, pork and fowl, frozen; five hundred and forty dozen fresh eggs, huge tubs of butter and lard and cheese, and 950 pounds of bacon. This last was an innovation. Earlier explorers had decided against bacon, but Byrd wanted some of the rich, compact meat.

The chief objects of the expedition were to charter new lands, and this alone made it important that Byrd get in ahead of Amundsen who would, naturally, have claimed any new territories that he found in the name of his own country; to compile data which would be of benefit to commercial aviation; and to gather information of value to the Federal meteorological service. The dramatic climax of the whole endeavor was to be a flight, or at the worst an attempted flight, around the North Pole.

Deprived now of any hope of going on a naval aerial expedition of magnitude, and notwithstanding the setbacks which he had suffered, setbacks which would have made many a man fear his own ability, he promptly set about organizing an Arctic expedition of his own, an aerial Arctic expedition, of course.

Byrd could not know it at the time, but the turning point had come. He had had his lean years. Now the fat was awaiting him. And he was ready. For almost ten years he had been preparing, studying, storing up knowledge. Now, just when he was filled to the bursting point, he found the opportunity to use all he had acquired. It wasn't given him. There was no business of pure and simple luck about it. He made his position by going out and inspiring the material assistance without which he could have done nothing.

In 1926 the old boyish dream, which was to reach the well-nigh incredible climax in 1929 above the South Pole, entered its first stage of reality. In that year Byrd made, successfully, his first Polar flight. Early in April the steamer Chantier, carrying the Commander and forty-seven volunteers, sailed out of New York Harbor with a blue and gold pennant flying from its masthead and farthest north as its goal. The man who was not strong enough to serve in the United States Navy was off on the first of two expeditions which were to equip him with that information which he needed to carry through the crowning achievement of his middle life—the dramatic expedition into the Antarctic, the spectacular flight over the South Pole.

Shortly before he set sail, Byrd gave public thanks to the men who had made his expedition possible. his financial backers—Edsel Ford, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Vincent Astor, A. L. Frothingham of Massachusetts, Dwight W. Morrow, Thomas Fortune Ryan, Porter W. Adams, William Schiff, Godfrey L. Cabot, R. F. Hoyt, P. D. Rouse, William A. Read, Captain and Mrs. Gibbons, Lorillard Spencer, the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, Robert W. Russell and William H. Todd.

These were the men who had supplied him with his ship, and had filled her hold with boxes, batteries, bags, barrels, crates, skiis, and a wealth of miscellaneous stores. These were the men who, most important of all, had supplied the giant Fokker plane which was to be used in the final dash to the top of the world, and the fleet Curtiss Oriole, the auxiliary ship of the air. The rescue ship, too, in case a rescue ship happened to be needed.

These backers were foremost among the thousands who waved Byrd a hearty farewell as he got his ship hastily underway. His was a hasty departure because inevitable delays had held him a considerable time after his planned day of leaving and it had become necessary to push on with all possible speed in order to get in his exploration expeditions before the advent of the dense fogs which always occur late in the Arctic Spring. Such fogs conceal the earth, making flying useless and well-nigh impossible.

There was another, equally legitimate need for speed. Byrd was only one of three men leading expeditions into the Far North that year. Captain George Wilkins was at Nome, Alaska, with both dogs and planes, preparing to cover virtually the same territory that had been included in Byrd's program. And in Rome, amid the cheers of a huge crowd, Captain Raold Amundsen, commanding the Amundsen-Ellsworth Mobile expedition, was getting away for Oslo, Norway, whence he planned to start on a dirigible flight which would also overlap, in its purpose, the Byrd expedition.

With his crew of forty-six men Byrd sent the unprententious Chantier rapidly down the bay and out into the ocean. Chief among his companions were:

Floyd O. Bennett, aviation pilot, United States Navy, second in command.

Lieut. G. O. Noville, U. S. N., third in command and flight engineer.

Lieut. Alton N. Parker, U. S. M. C. Reserve, pilot.

William C. Haynes, meteorologists, United States Weather Bureau.

Dr. Daniel O'Brien, physician of the expedition.

T. H. Kincaid, engine expert, Wright Aeronautical Corporation.

L. N. Peterson, mechanic.

All stout adventurers, and that they were assumed to be stout eaters, too, was attested by the provisions in the hold—400 pounds of pemmican, 4,500 pounds of whole carcass beef, great stores of corned and dried beef, mutton, pork and fowl, frozen; five hundred and forty dozen fresh eggs, huge tubs of butter and lard and cheese, and 950 pounds of bacon. This last was an innovation. Earlier explorers had decided against bacon, but Byrd wanted some of the rich, compact meat.

The chief objects of the expedition were to charter new lands, and this alone made it important that Byrd get in ahead of Amundsen who would, naturally, have claimed any new territories that he found in the name of his own country; to compile data which would be of benefit to commercial aviation; and to gather information of value to the Federal meteorological service. The dramatic climax of the whole endeavor was to be a flight, or at the worst an attempted flight, around the North Pole.

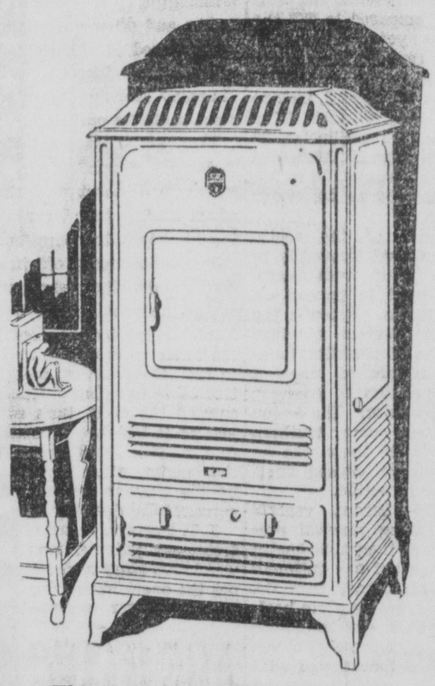
Again ... the Thunder of FREE COAL roaring into the Nation's Bins

On the morning of August 9th, we will begin enrolling members in our Annual Heatrola Free Coal Club—welcome news to all the thrifty and forward-looking people in this community who have been waiting for this announcement—waiting to reserve a genuine Estate Heatrola and a supply of Free Coal.



And how proud you'll be when your friends admire the handsome Heatrola there in your living-room—recognize it as the genuine Estate Heatrola—not an imitation. Reserve yours now for installation this Fall, by joining our Heatrola Free Coal Club. Read the details here, and in this week's Saturday Evening Post. Then plan to come in before August 30th—when we withdraw this offer—or phone and we'll come to see you.

This is one of the Heatrolas you can secure with Free Coal—the new Model 6-D. As beautiful as a radio-cabinet, more efficient than a basement furnace. There are two other models—all genuine Heatrolas, made by The Estate Stove Company, pioneer and largest builder of cabinet heaters.

When you see the coal-man driving up to your door with your Free Coal, you'll be glad you joined this club. But you'll be even happier when you begin to discover what a profitable investment your Heatrola is. For, it has many dividend-paying features—notably the famous and exclusive Intensi-Fire Air Duct, which delivers furnace warmth at the fuel cost of a single stove.

This shows the Intensi-Fire Air Duct — the "heat-heart" of Heatrola's double air-circulating system. You will find this marvelous invention only in the genuine Estate Heatrola.

FREE COAL ... here's how you get it

Come in, between August 9th and 30th. Enroll in the 1930 Heatrola Free Coal Club. Pay only $2.00—then $2.00 a week until your Heatrola is installed and the ton of Free Coal is delivered (one-half ton with Heatrola Junior). MUSICIAN OR MACHINE

The American Federation of Musicians is carrying on a big advertising campaign, principally in the newspapers, against "The Muses Nightmare." One of its ads says: "In music's darkest hour, amidst the din of canned music in theatres, there is still a ray of hope—the Music Defense League"

That organization maintains that it is "carrying on the greatest cultural struggle of modern times." It wants "living music in the theatre."

The campaign is legitimate It is evident, however to a disinterested person, that the zeal shown is produced as much by "economic determinism" as by love of art The musicians, to put it bluntly, are out to save their jobs. Living musicians who earn their living by it naturally want to keep on producing living music

Nearly everyone wishes them well. All the world is the friend of a musician, at least if he is a good one. The living voice and the living player of a musical instrument are rendering service that mere mechanism cannot render.

At the same time the claims of mechanical music, originating of course in the living vocalist and instrumentalist and growing steadily more artistic cannot be ignored. Surely there is room for both in this music-loving land

MORE LYNCHING

The lynching curve is rising again. As many persons were killed by mobs in this country during the last six months as in the whole of last year. An increase of 100 percent in a year is a pretty serious thing, even if the total indicated for 1930 is not so great as the usual customary a few years ago We like to feel that we are gaining in civilization and mob-murders are barbarism.

There is hope, though, even in this shocking situation. It is found not only in the greater horror which the general public has come to feel for these murders, but in the couragious stand taken by public executives in states frequently desecrated in the past by such crimes. Recent utterances from the governors of seven states —Virginia, Kentucky, Louisiana North Carolina, South Carolina Georgia and Texas—answering the public statement of a southern senator who upheld lynch law, have condemned lynching without reservation Their position is supported by the manly action of several sheriffs in recent months, risking their own lives in defying mobs and upholding the honor and dignity of the law when the easy thing would have been to yield

THE IDLE MARKET

A few years ago New York built the great Bronx Terminal Market at a cost of $17,000,000. It has six stories, with a large number of stalls for fruit and produce men. It has modern loading platforms, refrigerators, elevators and all the rest. It is one of the finest buildings of the kind in the world. It was built to serve what was supposed to be a great need in congested business district It has good railroad connections

Today it stands empty and unused except for two tennants, a fruit merchant and a purveyor of near bear. Its gross income is $15,000 a year. It has a staff of 51 employees drawing city salaries. It should have an income of about half a million a year to pay for itself.

For some reason or other the fruit and produce men prefer their old habits of trade in their old environment to all this efficiency and luxury. And the public that buys from them seems satisfied

Here is an unusual example of how hard it is for public authorities to direct the course of business Business usually prefers to find its own way

"The SEA BRIDE"

By BEN AMES WILLIAMS

THE ROMANCE OF AN EVENTFUL WHALING CRUISE

CHAPTER I

THEY were to be married before the open fire, in the big living-room of the old house on the hill Upstairs, Bess Holt was helping Faith dress Faith sat before the old, veneered dressing-table with its little mirror tilting on the curved standards, and submitted quietly and happily to Bess's ministrations. Bess was a chatterbox, and her tongue flew as nimbly as the deft fingers that arranged Faith's veil.

Faith was content, her soft eyes resting on her own image in the little mirror were like the eyes of one who dreams dreams and sees visions. She scarce heard Bess at all.

Only once she turned and looked slowly about this low-ceilinged old room that had been her home. The high, soft bed, with its canopy resting on the four tall posts, the high chest of drawers, the little dressing-table, the delicate chairs —these were all old and familiar friends whom she was leaving behind her. And she loved them, loved the ugly paper on the wall, loved the old daguerreotypes above the chest of drawers, loved the crooked sampler that hung by the never-used fireplace She loved all these things'

She smiled happily and confidently She loved them, but she loved big Noll Wing better She would not regret—

Below the stairs her father, Jem Kilcup, talked with Dr. Brant, the minister They spoke of wind and weather, as men do whose lives lie near the sea They spoke of oil, of ships, of tedious cruises when the seas were bare of whales

Their talk wandered everywhere, save where their thoughts were, they did not speak of Faith nor of Noll Wing Jem could not bear to speak of his girl who was going from his arms to another's; the minister understood, and joined with him in a conspiracy of silence. Only, when Bess came whispering down to say that Faith was ready, old Jem gripped Dr Brant's arm and whispered harshly into the minister's ear:

"Marry them tight and marry them hard and true, doctor By God —"

Dr Brant nodded

"No fear, my friend," he said "[illegible]"

"Aye," said Jem hoarsely "Aye, a[illegible] God help [illegible]

tears in their eyes. Bess Holt, alone, did not weep. She was to play the organ; she sat down upon the stool and spread her pretty, soft skirts about her, and looked back over her shoulder to where Jem Kilcup stood out in the hall. He was to signal to her when Faith was ready.

Dr. Brant crossed and stood beside the fireplace, where the logs were laid, ready for the match. Noll Wing and Henry Ham took stand with him.

Cap'n Noll Wing stood easily, squarely upon his spread legs. He was a big man; his chest swelled barrel-like; his arms stretched the sleeves of his black coat. Cap'n Wing was seldom seen without a cap upon his head Some of those in the room discovered in this moment, for the first time, that he was bald

The tight, white skin upon his skull contrasted unpleasantly with the brown of his leathern cheeks. The tuck hair about [illegible] ears was tinged with gray. Across his nose and his firm cheek [illegible] sun had drew lacy patterns of pur[illegible] Garnished in [illegible] wedding finery [illegible] was never-the-less a man fair [illegible] to, and now taking—a[illegible] as old [illegible] Jem Kilcup a[illegible] ing Jem [illegible] Kilcup's daughter [illegible] an old [illegible] but a man [illegible] strong and [illegible] up He [illegible] had [illegible] the leaning of [illegible] ned [illegible] to command and [illegible] Ray [illegible] looked at [illegible] eyes of [illegible] Bess [illegible] over her [illegible] saw old [illegible] in the [illegible] men kissed Faith as she [illegible] there, hanging on her father's arm Then Bess Holt cried [illegible]

It was true In the [illegible] moments before Faith [illegible] down stairs no one had remembered to touch a match to the kindling under the smooth wood [illegible] in the great fireplace. Cap'n Wing found himself abashed. He was glad when the word was said.

Noll Wing when she opened her eyes to him and let him look into the depths of her.

A woman who loves wishes to give Faith gave all hers if in that gift of her quiet, steady eyes Cap'n Wing, before them, found himself abashed. He was glad when the word was said, when the still room stirred to life. He kissed Faith hurriedly, he was a little afraid of her Then the others pressed forward and separated them, and he was glad enough to be thrust back to be able to laugh and jest and grip the hands of men.

The women and some of the men kissed Faith as she stood there, hanging on her father's arm Then Bess Holt cried [illegible]

Faith, the fire was [illegible] lighted"

Safeguarding the Mothers and Babies

Welfare Agencies Assure Far Reaching Results in Health Betterment for the Coming Generation

By R. S. COPELAND, M. D.
U. S Senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health New York City.

A FEW years ago the maternal and infant mortality rate was a good deal higher than it is today. Most of our large cities have a tremendous problem in safeguarding the lives and health of the mothers and babies.

New York City is fortunate in the work being done by public and private agencies in promoting maternal and child health. In this connection a recent health inventory made by the Welfare Council of the city reports many interesting facts. To quote from this report.

"Every four minutes, day and night, a child is born in New York City, 128,000 a year Seventy-two hundred of these babies die before they are a year old, more than half this number within the first month of their lives, and about 40 per cent within the first week. For every 200 children born in this city a mother dies at childbirth"

The welfare agencies, public and private, provide a great army of social workers, nutrition workers, doctors, nurses, clerks and investigators. They are engaged in this great work of caring for the lives and health of the mothers and babies Besides these, there are the thousands of doctors and nurses in private practice who assist in conserving the health of the coming generation The recognition of the importance of pre-natal services in maternity work has rapidly advanced since 1915

The visiting nurse has a very important part to play in this maternity service It is reported that 63,000 visits were made by nurses from the pre-natal clinics of the city in one year. Besides this, several of the nursing organizations reported 157,000 visits made to the homes of maternity patients who were under the care of private physicians and midwives

What a great humanitarian work this! Great aid is rendered by private enterprises for health conservation, such as the Rockefeller Foundation and the Commonwealth Fund, with the studies made under grants from them. The undertaking bids fair to bring about far reaching results in health betterment for the coming generation.

It is only through preventive measures for health all along the line, from pre-natal days up through adult life, that mankind can hope to be free from illness and disease Good health is the foundation of everything else.

ANY CHILD

WE can never be sure just what makes a child restless, but the remedy can always be the same. Good old Castoria! There's comfort in every drop of this pure vegetable preparation, and not the slightest harm in its frequent use. As often as your child has a fretful spell, is feverish, or cries and can't sleep, let Castoria soothe and quiet him. Sometimes it's a touch of colic. Sometimes constipation. Or diarrhea—a condition that should always be checked without delay. Just keep Castoria handy, and give it promptly. Relief will follow very promptly; if it doesn't, you should call a physician.

Callouses Go Too

The safest and real modern way to remove corns, root and all —out to stay is soak them every night for 3 or 4 nights in an invigorating, stimulating Radox Footbath.

Then put on modish shoes again, walk and dance with greatest comfort because there's nothing left to ache No pain, no trouble.

Radox liberates oxygen which softens hard outer layer of corn, each night penetrating further and further through the pores, carrying the salts to actual root of corn, so loosening it that it comes right out. MUSICIAN OR MACHINE

The American Federation of Musicians is carrying on a big advertising campaign, principally in the newspapers, against "The Muses Nightmare." One of its ads says: "In music's darkest hour, amidst the din of canned music in theatres, there is still a ray of hope—the Music Defense League."

That organization maintains that it is "carrying on the greatest cultural struggle of modern times." It wants "living music in the theatre."

The campaign is legitimate. It is evident, however to a disinterested person, that the zeal shown is produced as much by "economic determinism" as by love of art. The musicians, to put it bluntly, are out to save their jobs. Living musicians who earn their living by it naturally want to keep on producing living music.

Nearly everyone wishes them well. All the world is the friend of a musician, at least if he is a good one. The living voice and the living player of a musical instrument are rendering service that mere mechanism cannot render.

At the same time the claims of mechanical music, originating of course in the living vocalist and instrumentalist and growing steadily more artistic cannot be ignored. Surely there is room for both in this music-loving land.

MORE LYNCHING

The lynching curve is rising again. As many persons were killed by mobs in this country during the last six months as in the whole of last year. An increase of 100 percent in a year is a pretty serious thing, even if the total indicated for 1930 is not so great as the usual customary a few years ago. We like to feel that we are gaining in civilization and mob-murders are barbarism.

There is hope, though, even in this shocking situation. It is found not only in the greater horror which the general public has come to feel for these murders, but in the couragious stand taken by public executives in states frequently desecrated in the past by such crimes. Recent utterances from the governors of seven states —Virginia, Kentucky, Louisiana, North Carolina, South Carolina Georgia and Texas—answering the public statement of a southern senator who upheld lynch law, have condemned lynching without reservation. Their position is supported by the manly action of several sheriffs in recent months, risking their own lives in defying mobs and upholding the honor and dignity of the law when the easy thing would have been to yield.

THE IDLE MARKET

A few years ago New York built the great Bronx Terminal Market at a cost of $17,000,000. It has six stories, with a large number of stalls for fruit and produce men. It has modern loading platforms, refrigerators, elevators and all the rest. It is one of the finest buildings of the kind in the world. It was built to serve what was supposed to be a great need in congested business district. It has good railroad connections.

Today it stands empty and unused except for two tennants, a fruit merchant and a purveyor of near bear. Its gross income is $15,000 a year. It has a staff of 51 employees drawing city salaries. It should have an income of about half a million a year to pay for itself.

For some reason or other, the fruit and produce men prefer their old habits of trade in their old environment to all this efficiency and luxury. And the public that buys from them seems satisfied.

Here is an unusual example of how hard it is for public authorities to direct the course of business. Business usually prefers to find its own way.

"The SEA BRIDE"

By BEN AMES WILLIAMS

THE ROMANCE OF AN EVENTFUL WHALING CRUISE

CHAPTER I

THEY were to be married before the open fire, in the big living-room of the old house on the hill. Upstairs, Bess Holt was helping Faith dress. Faith sat before the old, veneered dressing-table with its little mirror tilting on the curved standards, and submitted quietly and happily to Bess's ministrations. Bess was a chatterbox, and her tongue flew as nimbly as the deft fingers that arranged Faith's veil.

Faith was content; her soft eyes resting on her own image in the little mirror were like the eyes of one who dreams dreams and sees visions. She scarce heard Bess at all.

Only once she turned and looked slowly about this low-ceilinged old room that had been her home. The high, soft bed, with its canopy resting on the four tall posts; the high chest of drawers, the little dressing-table, the delicate chairs —these were all old and familiar friends whom she was leaving behind her. And she loved them, loved the ugly paper on the wall, loved the old daguerreotypes above the chest of drawers, loved the crooked sampler that hung by the never-used fireplace. She loved all these things!

She smiled happily and confidently. She loved them, but she loved big Noll Wing better. She would not regret—

Below the stairs her father, Jem Kilcup, talked with Dr. Brant, the minister. They spoke of wind and weather, as men do whose lives lie near the sea. They spoke of oil, of ships, of tedious cruises when the seas were bare of whales.

Their talk wandered everywhere, save where their thoughts were; they did not speak of Faith nor of Noll Wing. Jem could not bear to speak of his girl who was going from his arms to another's; the minister understood, and joined with him in a conspiracy of silence. Only, when Bess came whispering down to say that Faith was ready, old Jem gripped Dr. Brant's arm and whispered harshly into the minister's ear:

"Marry them tight and marry them hard and true, doctor. By God—"

Dr. Brant nodded.

"No fear, my friend," he said. "Faith is a woman—"

"Aye," said Jem hoarsely. "Aye; and she's made her bed. God help her!"

Things began to stir in the big house. Noll Wing was in the back room with Henry Ham, who had sailed with him three voyages and would back him in this new venture. Young Roy Kilcup had found them there. Old Jem had a demijohn of cherry rum, thirty years unopened. He sent it in to Noll, and Noll Wing smacked his lips over it cheerfully and became more amiable than was his custom.

Roy Kilcup caught him in this mood and took quick advantage of it. When the three came in where Jem and Dr. Brant were waiting, Roy crossed and gripped his father's arm.

"I'm going," he whispered. "Cap'n Wing will take me as ship's boy. He's promised, dad."

Old Jem nodded. His children were leaving him; he was past protesting.

"I'm ready," Roy told his father. "I'm going to pack right after they're married." He saw Dr. Brant smile, and whispered: "Be quick as you can, sir."

The minister touched the boy's shoulder reassuringly.

"Quiet, Roy," he said. "There's time!"

People were gathering in the living-room from the other parts of the house. They came by twos and threes. The men were awkward and uneasy, and strove to be jocular; the women smiled with tears in their eyes. Bess Holt, alone, did not weep. She was to play the organ; she sat down upon the stool and spread her pretty, soft skirts about her, and looked back over her shoulder to where Jem Kilcup stood out in the hall. He was to signal to her when Faith was ready.

Dr. Brant crossed and stood beside the fireplace, where the logs were laid, ready for the match. Noll Wing and Henry Ham took stand with him.

Cap'n Noll Wing stood easily, squarely upon his spread legs. He was a big man; his chest swelled barrel-like; his arms stretched the sleeves of his black coat. Cap'n Wing was seldom seen without a cap upon his head. Some of those in the room discovered in this moment, for the first time, that he was bald.

The tight, white skin upon his skull contrasted unpleasantly with the brown of his leathern cheeks. The thick hair about his ears was tinged with gray. Across his nose and his firm cheeks tiny veins drew lacy patterns of purple. Garnished in wedding finery, he was nevertheless a man past middle life, and no mistaking—a man almost as old as Jem Kilcup and wedding Jem Kilcup's daughter. He was an old man, but a man for all that; stout and strong and full of sap. He had the dignity of mastery; he had the bearing of a man accustomed to command and be obeyed. Roy Kilcup looked at him with eyes of worship. Bess, watching over her shoulder, saw old Jem look up the stairs, then turn and nod awkwardly to her. She pressed the keys, the organ breathed, the tones swelled forth and filled the room. Still, over her shoulder, she watched the door, as did every other eye. They saw Faith appear there by her father's side; they saw her hand drop lightly on his arm. Jem moved; his broad shoulders brushed the sides of the door. He brought his daughter in and turned with her upon his arm toward where Noll Wing was waiting.

Faith's eyes, as she came through the door, swept the room once before they found the eyes of Cap'n Wing and rested there. That single glance had shown her Dan'l Tobey, behind the others, near the window, and the memory of Dan'l's face played before her as she moved toward where Noll waited. Poor Dan'l! She pitied him as women do pity the lover they do not love. She had been hard on Dan'l. Not her fault, but still the truth. Hard on Dan'l Tobey. And misery dwelt upon his countenance, so that she could not forget, even while she went to meet Noll Wing before the minister.

While they made their responses, Noll in his heavy voice of a master, and Faith in the level tone of a proud, sure woman, her eyes met his and promised him things unutterable. It is this speaking of eyes to eyes that is marriage; the words are of comparatively small account. Faith pledged herself to Noll Wing when she opened her eyes to him and let him look into the depths of her.

Cap'n Wing found himself abashed. He was glad when the word was said.

A woman who loves wishes to give. Faith gave all herself in that gift of her quiet, steady eyes. Cap'n Wing, before them, found himself abashed. He was glad when the word was said, when the still room stirred to life. He kissed Faith hurriedly; he was a little afraid of her. Then the others pressed forward and separated them, and he was glad enough to be thrust back, to be able to laugh and jest and grip the hands of men.

The women and some of the men kissed Faith as she stood there, hanging on her father's arm. Then Bess Holt cried in dismay:

"Faith, the fire was never lighted!"

It was true. In the swift moments before Faith came down stairs no one had remembered to touch a match to the kindling under the smooth, white-birch log in the great fireplace. When Faith saw this she felt a pang of disappointment at her heart. She loved a fire, an open fire, merrily blazing.

for
ANY CHILD

WE can never be sure just what makes a child restless, but the remedy can always be the same. Good old Castoria! There's comfort in every drop of this pure vegetable preparation, and not the slightest harm in its frequent use. As often as your child has a fretful spell, is feverish, or cries and can't sleep, let Castoria soothe and quiet him. Sometimes it's a touch of colic. Sometimes constipation. Or diarrhea—a condition that should always be checked without delay. Just keep Castoria handy, and give it promptly. Relief will follow very promptly; if it doesn't, you should call a physician.

Lift Them Out
CORNS
Callouses Go Too

The safest and real modern way to remove corns, root and all —out to stay is soak them every night for 3 or 4 nights in an invigorating, stimulating Radox Footbath.

Then put on modish shoes again, walk and dance with greatest comfort because there's nothing left to ache. No pain, no trouble.

Radox liberates oxygen which softens hard outer layer of corn, each night penetrating further and further through the pores, carrying the salts to actual root of corn, so loosening it that it comes right out. Nothing like healthy, free from corn feet to assure happy days! Get a package of Radox at Hamilton & Ryan's, or any drug store.—Adv.

AT THE METROPOLITAN

Spectacular, perfect in plot, lavish in laughs and dynamically dramatic is "Hell's Island," the Columbia production which opened at the Metropolitan theatre last night for three days.

Take two such popular stars as Jack Holt and Ralph Graves and turn them loose in such a colorful environment as northern Africa during the Riff disturbance, and the result is magnificient.

For lovers of action there is the spectacular campaign against the Arabs with Riff horsemen charging headlong into the fire of the French machine guns; the sensational escape of Ralph Graves from the pestilential tropical prison of Hell's Island. and a fight between Graves and Holt that spells fast action.

Humor in abundance is provided by the efforts of the hard-fisted Yankee Legionnaires, portrayed by Holt and Graves, to steal each other's girl friends. The dialogue is highly spiced Romance, too is found in the sincere love scenes; the exotic atmosphere of an Arabian oasis: the Oriental music and dancing Then there are moments of stark drama when two strong men stand face to face, each determined to see things through to the bitter end

Holt and Graves are magnificent. Dorothy Sebastian portrays the feminine lead with unusual excellence. Edward Sloman has directed with skill

ROBINS GAIN ON CHI CUBS

Win With Thurston On Hill While McCarthy-men Lose To Cardinals, 4-3.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Not how good are the Robins but how bad are the Cubs eventually may decide the feverish National League battle and judging from today's record of Chicago, the Brooklyn outfit has a right to be highly optimistic.

Chicago dropped a 4 to 3 effort to St. Louis yesterday, increasing the Rooins lead to three and one-half games, after the Cubs went into the fifth inning with a two-run lead. George Watkins, a Cardinal pinch hitter, sent the Redbirds ahead in the seventh when he homered with one on but the worst of it you haven't heard. Jim Lindsey, a second string hurler, fanned both Grimm and Hartnett, mighty Chicago sluggers, in the ninth with the bases bogged.

The Robins opened their western invasion of 22 games by taking an easy affair from the Pirates, 7 to 4. Hollis Thurston pitched airtight ball, until the seventh. Al Lope started it for flock with a homer after Bisonette singled Sad Sam Jones gloomed the Athletics with six tiny hits and triumphed for Washington, 5 to 1.

Three Sox errors and a batting barrage by Gehrig and Rice enabled the Yanks to basket a listless skirmish with Boston, 4 to 2.

Coffman gave the White Sox only three safeties and the Brownies rang up a shutout, 5 to 0 but Chicago retaliated in the finale as the ancient "Red" Faber spaced St Louis hits and won. 5 to 2.

George Uhle was as mysterious as a library murder to Cleveland's hitters and Detroit grabbed its sixth straight. 9 to 1.

Pitcher Phil Collins thought he was going to waste one in the ninth on Randy Moors but the Boston Brave third baseman socked it into left field, scoring Richbourg with the run that won for the Braves over the Phillies. 5 to 4.

The Giants and Reds were idle.

Thoughts of a Silent Talking Machine

I used to believe that old saying about 'music hath charms' but not any more Nobody has phoned me for six months

'The only attention I get is from somebody that puts me off. You'd think I was some sort of a tramp the way they treat me instead of a real artist

'Why I've held the stage with Caruso in 'Il Trovatore' marched down the street with John Philip Sousa and helped Al Jolson sing over his own songs! And now the owners put a lace cover and a cheap vase on me and never ask me to do a thing

'This is a correspondence school opening up now asking me for a testimonial. She's criticizing for not having any new records—I should think she would! I'm ashamed to sing some of the old stuff

Say—that isn't a caller at the door. Not by a long shot. It's the boy going to buy me—I've been advertised in the "Merchandise" column of The Circleville Herald "I might have known that!"

BERG MEETS CUBAN KEED

Odds Favor English Lad, 6-5, On Day of Fight; Winner May Go to Champion

BY DAVIS J. WALSH.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Jackie Kid Berg, of England, and Kid Chocolate, of Cuba, the one rising eminence from the squalor of London's Whitechapel, the other once a half-naked street gamin in Havana, will fight 10 rounds at the Polo Grounds tonight for a stake that is rich in money but far richer in its promise of rewards to come. The winner, they say, will be the next lightweight champion of the world, which is going pretty far, since the next lightweight champion is quite liable to be the present holder of the title, Al Singer. As a fighter, the latter is nobody's chuckle head.

However, only the whimsies of chance have kept Berg from being the champion today. It is obvious now that the first man to get to Sammy Mandell was to win the title Singer got there first. So tonight Berg must go down to the class below in order to prove that he is an adequate challenger in the lightweight division. New York is like that. Berg ruled a 6 to 5 favorite this morning and it is probable that his price will be longer by nightfall.

ROBERT J. BULKLEY

For

UNITED STATES SENATOR

Democratic Primary Election, Tuesday, Aug. 12

CANDID

In a candid statement Robert J. Bulkley has made clear his position on prohibition.

Bulkley favors and will work for repeal of the 18th amendment and for legislation to restore to the states their constitutional right to determine how alcoholic beverages shall be governed. He stands firmly for repeal of Volstead Act.

He is the only Senatorial candidate to take a constructive stand on the prohibition problem. Others have either side-stepped the issue or declared themselves for a continuation of the present impossible enforcement program.

ROBERT J. BULKLEY

QUALIFIED

Through the 62nd and 63rd Congresses, Robert J. Bulkley was a leader. He helped draft and pass the Federal Reserve Act. He drew the original draft of the Farm Loan Act. In other legislation, important to Ohio and nationally, he was an active factor.

Close to national affairs, entirely frank in his campaign platform and possessing the experience which assures Ohio of a man of unusual ability at Washington, Robert J. Bulkley is the logical candidate for United States Senator.

WIDELY ENDORSED

Leading newspapers of Ohio, publications of wide circulation and influence, have endorsed the candidacy of Robert J. Bulkley for United States Senator.

In Bulkley, editors see a man who will represent Ohio as the great mass of Ohioans would be represented in the United States Senate.

Bulkley is endorsed, too, by the thousands of his own community, a community where courage, ability and results only can obtain an endorsement.

Bulkley has been a life-long Democrat, ever loyal to the party. He was a delegate to the two conventions which nominated Woodrow Wilson. He helped carry Cleveland for Alfred E. Smith in 1928. Never deviating from the Democratic party, he is the candidate for whom Democrats should vote.

Go to the Democratic primary election next Tuesday. Find the name of Robert J. Bulkley in the list of candidates for United States Senator. Put a cross in front of it as indicated below. This will be for the best interest of the entire state of Ohio.

BEN GORDON'S OUTFIT AGAIN SHOWS CLASS WINNING TILT

George Vlerebome Hands Out Only Four Bingles To Tough Grocer Outfit As Mates Pound Purcell For 16.

Gordon Tires went into a tighter clinch for the possesion of first place in the recreation ball league standing Wednesday when they defeated the Independent Grocers by the score of 10 - 2. The game was played at the Utilities park

Thunder began to roll for the tire men in the second inning when Steele had a hit in outfield, followed by Pickens who reached base through a muffed ball, and then Trimmer laid a nice hit over first. Glitt singled and Steele scored, followed by Pickens, through a hit.

There wasn't a thing slow about the Grocerymen as they came right back in the second frame and scored two runs to tally the score when Purcell reached base through a nice hit followed by Ralph Wallace who had a fine hit and sent Purcell to third. Lane knocked a fly and Purcell ran home. Wallace ran home on a fly ball.

Nevertheless, the Gordon-men broke the ice in the immediate inning when they scored through a hit, an error and a miss-judgment on the part of an outfielder. Their real scoring period began in the third frame when they tallied with five runs, all of which crossed the plate so soon that no one knew what was coming off. It looked as though the Grocerymen had gone to sleep as during this period several errors were recorded.

From the second inning on, the food-men were unable to do any scoring, nevertheless they would often get a man as far as second and third.

The Crum-coached aggregation completed its scoring in the sixth stanza when the ninth and tenth runs crossed. These were scored through two errors and three clean hits.

The diamond was ideal for playing ball, as the rain had settled the dust throughly, and the field was not muddy.

Tubby Vlerebome appeared as moundsman for the league leaders, and pitched a good game, allowing no men on base free and was given credit for two strike-outs, and his opponent, Purcell was touched freely.

The game was featured with some beautiful one-handed catches Mel Mettler raced into the sidelines between a couple of autos and nabbed a fly off Robinsons bat single handed, as also did Howard Goldsberry in center field pick a "what would have been" nice hit out of the air.

With this defeat the Grocers continue to descend toward the dark and dreary cellar which is now occupied by the Woodmen and Corn Cutters of America.

TIRE-OIL MEN BLANK AXMEN FOR 34TH SCORELESS INNING

Eddie Watson 'Just Too Tough' Granting Only Two Bingles To Woodmen In Contest Won By His Team By 16-0 Score.

Eddie Watson and his Pettit-Sinclair gang chalked up their thirty-fourth scoreless inning when they shut out the Modern Woodmen by one of the biggest run margins that has been recorded for some time. The score of the game played at Mason's before a large crowd was 16 to 0.

Watson granted only two hits, both doubles.

The real reason that can be given for the Woodmen's defeat was not the usual "comedy of errors," but was the fact that the tire and oil men started swatting the ball in the first inning and never stopped until the third out was made in the ninth stanza. During the game the Pettit-men were credited with 20 hits, almost all of which resulted in runs.

The Woodmen had seven errors checked against them.

The Pettit-Sinclair men started their scoring in the first fray when Don White had a nice hit, was finally run around as far as third and went to home plate on a hit.

Every time the Woodmen came to bat they would either pop up or knock short grounders and would be put out at first. Several instances they had a man as far as third but he was unable to score. Two Woodmen batters had nice two-base hits which probably could have resulted in runs, but they didn't.

The tire men scored in every inning but three, the second, fifth and sixth, but they made up for these scoreless frays in the remaining innings, as in the seventh, eighth and ninth they scored three, four and two, making a total of nine.

During the entire game the tire and oil men were just slamming the ball all over the lot and scoring so many runs that the Foresters did not know what was coming off, and as a result more or less gave up the ship, and let the runs trickle over the plate, one, two, three, etc.

Chuck Holland, a new pitcher in 'rec' ball circles appeared on the mound for the losers.

Eddie Watson hurled his regular steady ball and was given credit for five more strikeouts and gave two walks. The Pettit-Sinclair's have firmly established themselves as pennant contenders.

When Ford meets Franklin they have this in common . . .

THERE may be a radical difference in cooling systems—and in purchase price.

but Fords and Franklins are just alike in one respect: Their owners prefer Sohio 3⅔ to 1 over any other gasoline sold in Ohio.

Those are certified figures taken from a statewide survey of gasoline preference, in which 93,694 Ohio motorists were asked, "What gasoline do you use most?"

The point is, of course, that if you aren't already a Sohio user you are missing something worth while, whether you reckon the cost of your car in hundreds or in thousands of dollars.

And remember—50% more Ethyl since July 1st gives you even greater power, smoothness and freedom from "knock". Try it.

HILLS SEEM LOWER SINCE JULY 1st

When Standard of Ohio introduced Sohio Extra-Ethyl on July 1st, the thousands of Ohio motorists who used it found their cars climbed steep grades even easier than before. The addition of over 50% more Ethyl Fluid is responsible. The difference over all other gasolines is most easily measured in terms of knock-freedom.

WHEN BETTER AUTOMOBILES ARE BUILT . . . BUICK WILL BUILD THEM

When Ford meets Franklin they have this in common . . .

THERE may be a radical difference in cooling systems—and in purchase price.

But Fords and Franklins are just alike in one respect: Their owners prefer Sohio 3⅗ to 1 over any other gasoline sold in Ohio.

Those are certified figures taken from a statewide survey of gasoline preference, in which 93,694 Ohio motorists were asked, "What gasoline do you use most?"

The point is, of course, that if you aren't already a Sohio user you are missing something worth while, whether you reckon the cost of your car in hundreds or in thousands of dollars.

And remember—50% more Ethyl since July 1st gives you even greater power, smoothness and freedom from "knock". Try it.

HILLS SEEM LOWER SINCE JULY 1st

When Standard of Ohio introduced Sohio Extra-Ethyl on July 1st, the thousands of Ohio motorists who used it found their cars climbed steep grades even easier than before. The addition of over 50% more Ethyl Fluid is responsible. The difference over all other gasolines is most easily measured in terms of knock-freedom.

A Legend of Darkest Africa Unveiled for the First Time! Strange and Unknown Customs of Savage Natives Revealed! Unbelievable Scenes of Barbarism Disclosed!

The Strangest Film Ever Made!

NOTICE—"Ingagi" is the most discussed motion picture in the country today. Scientists, explorers, big game hunters, critics, have denied its authenticity in lengthy articles. It is claimed that "Ingagi" is not the authentic record of an expedition into darkest Africa, that it was partly filmed in native wilds and partly in a Hollywood studio, that it purports to have no scientific value, and is but fiction presented solely for the entertainment of the public; that the explorers shown on this visionary expedition are not scientific men, but actors, that other actors disguised as gorillas take part in some of the gorilla scenes, that a number of animals pictured are not filmed in the natural environment, and that the pygmies and the native women in the gorilla scenes are not African natives. One thing is certain, however. Regardless of its authenticity, "Ingagi" is playing to tremendous crowds everywhere it is being shown. This fact alone is indicative of its entertainment value The public does not go to the theatre unless there is something of interest to see. And evidently "Ingagi" possesses this feature. We present "Ingagi" solely as entertainment and make no claim concerning the authenticity of any scene shown in the picture. May we suggest that you see it and judge for yourself.
